

UX Design

3

Part 3 contains several chapters about UX design, starting with a description of the nature of design and a discussion of the critical difference between bottom-up design and top-down design. Next is the ideation, sketching, and critiquing activities in generative design and a chapter on how designer and user mental models come together in the conceptual design.

Three chapters are devoted to design in each layer of the UX design pyramid: for designing the ecology, the interaction, and for emotional impact.